Welcome to the Work and Family Researchers Network 2016 Conference!

I am pleased, as President of the 2016 Work and Family Researchers Network (WFRN), to welcome you to our third conference, the first one to be held in Washington, D.C. With the large theme Careers, Care, and Life-Course “Fit:” Implications for Health, Equality, and Policy, my aim has been to focus on dynamics and contexts, including the contexts of different family and work stages and ages, as well as the contexts defined by organizational and public policy constraints and possibilities. As you will see in the program, a lot of you picked up on and extended these themes in imaginative and exciting new ways.

Everything has changed and is changing – the nature of work, the nature of the workforce, the nature of families, and uncertain global economy, warp-speed technological innovation, and a weakening safety net – but we remain stuck with institutions developed in the 1950’s.

Much of this conference is about recognizing these changes and the need to acknowledge the multilayered dislocations defining the contemporary work and family experience, as well as the need to reshape existing institutions and to fashion new, more sustainable arrangements that promote family and individual health and well-being in tandem with gender equality. Jerry Jacobs (visionary founding President and current Executive Officer of the WFRN), Anne Kaduk (PhD candidate at the University of Minnesota, moving to work at Facebook), and I were impressed with program submissions, as were the other two program co-chairs (Suzan Lewis and Hanna van Solinge).

The Program Committee (see listing on p. 68) provided important leadership in trying out new arrangements: Education/Policy Day, Practitioner Day, Discussion Forums, Special Interest Group (SIG) meetings, coffee/tea with posters, shorter presentations together with more audience participation. We owe tremendous thanks to Anne and Jerry as well as Kay Dowgun, Nancy Permsap, Rachel Karen, and Brad Smith for putting all the pieces together. Thanks also to Emily Dombeck who designed the program cover.

You are now in charge of making this conference a success. The program is truly interdisciplinary and international (people from 47 different countries are attending, presenting in about 130 sessions!). We are a fantastic network of work and family scholars and students from across the world. I have no doubt that the program offers lots of interesting sessions. But will you also help me to make it interactive and fun? DO ask questions and offer insights to poster authors and in sessions, including our trial Discussion Forums. DO talk to people you don’t know … you might learn something new, find a new colleague or friend. And seek out the viewpoints of those in other collaborations, as well as bridging the research/policy/practice divides. Netsy Firestein and the Working Assumptions Foundation have provided us with a wonderful reception and SHOWING (work x family), a cultural project that uses photography to celebrate all kinds of families. And there will be music as well!

My hope is that we all come away inspired to build on and extend the amazing body of evidence and action this program offers, furthering understanding and promoting the quality of the work-family nexus in all its contexts, dynamics, and dimensions.

Wishing you all the best,

Phyllis Moen
WFRN President (phylmoen@umn.edu)
General Conference Information

Registration

The WFRN registration desk is located on the second floor foyer of the Capital Hilton. The registration desk will be open:

Wednesday, 4:00-7:30 PM
Thursday, 7:30 AM-4:00 PM
Friday, 7:30 AM-4:00 PM
Saturday, 7:30 AM-Noon

If you are arriving on Wednesday, we encourage you to pick up your name badge and tote bag on Wednesday afternoon.

The conference will begin on Thursday, June 23 with a welcome breakfast and a WFRN general business meeting from 7:30-9:00 AM in the Presidential Ballroom. PLEASE JOIN US!

Meeting Rooms

All of the meeting rooms are located on the second floor of the Capital Hilton, including the Presidential Ballroom where the plenary sessions will be held. The Exhibit Hall will also be located on the Upper Lobby of the second floor, near the registration tables. The second floor is designed to facilitate networking and interaction among the conference attendees.

NB: The Presidential Ballroom will be available for informal meetings throughout most of the conference. There will also be a Lactation Room.

The Work Family Congressional Education and Policy Day is a pre-conference activity to be held June 22, the day before the Work and Family Researchers Network (WFRN) 2016 Conference opens in Washington, D.C. (see page 6). This special day will be co-hosted by the National Partnership for Women & Families and the Washington Center for Equitable Growth. Work and family researchers from across the country and around the globe will have the opportunity to meet with members of Congress to educate them about issues such as paid family and medical leave, paid sick days, and fair scheduling. The day includes a welcome breakfast, training sessions, and meetings on Capitol Hill – and also a Congressional briefing and a reception with a special multimedia photo exhibit “SHOWING (work x family)” – a cultural project that uses photography in public spaces to reveal the intimate choreography of work and family.

Session and Presentation Length

The 2016 WFRN Conference Program consists of about 130 sessions over three days! Regular sessions are 90 minutes, with the exception of two 60-minute coffee/tea & poster sessions on Thursday and Friday afternoons from 4:00-5:00 PM. Each Symposium presenter should plan to speak for approximately 10 minutes, with the expectation that about 5 minutes of questions will follow each presentation, and there should be time available at the end of the session for additional comments and discussion. Laptop computers with projectors and screens will be provided for Symposium sessions. Each Discussion Forum presenter should also aim for 10 minutes. Discussion Forums will be held in “roundtable” format, so no AV equipment will be provided at these sessions.

Audiovisual Equipment

Screens, projectors and PC laptops will be available in all rooms hosting Symposia and regular sessions. No audiovisual equipment will be available for Discussion Forum or Poster sessions. If you are using a Mac, make sure you bring a VGA adapter to connect to the LCD projector. Please note that Internet access will not be available in the conference meeting rooms. If you plan to show a video clip as part of your powerpoint presentation, please be sure it is embedded in your presentation and does not require an Internet link.

Poster Sessions

A 3 foot high and 2 foot wide poster mounted on an easel will be provided, and tiger clips will also be available. Presenters may clip as much material as will fit on this size presentation. Presenters are also welcome to bring handouts to distribute to attendees. No audiovisual equipment will be available for poster sessions. There will be one poster session on Thursday and one on Friday in the Upper Lobby on the second floor of the Capital Hilton:

Thursday, 4:00-5:00 PM with coffee/tea break
Friday, 4:00-5:00 PM with coffee/tea break

Presenters should arrive 15 minutes prior to their session to set up materials. Posters may be left on display for the remainder of the day following each session, but should be removed at the end of the day.

Lunch Breaks

Lunch is “on your own,” with breaks from 12:00-1:00 PM on Thursday and Friday.

Work Family Congressional Education and Policy Day

The Work Family Congressional Education and Policy Day is to be held June 22, the day before the Work and Family Researchers Network (WFRN) 2016 Conference opens in Washington, D.C. This special day will be co-hosted by the National Partnership for Women & Families and the Washington Center for Equitable Growth. Work and family researchers from across the country and around the globe will have the opportunity to meet with members of Congress to educate them about issues such as paid family and medical leave, paid sick days, and fair scheduling. The day includes a welcome breakfast, an interactive training session (including how to make your research most relevant to legislators and their staff), and meetings on Capitol Hill to share your perspective and research, as well as a Congressional briefing and a reception with a special multimedia photo exhibit SHOWING (work x family).

Location: Parish Hall at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation (212 East Capitol Street NE, Washington, DC 20003)

Agenda:

8:00-9:00 AM  Check-in and breakfast
9:00-9:30 AM   Welcome
9:30-10:00 AM  What does it mean to educate and what to expect on Capitol Hill
10:00-11:00 AM Issue briefing
11:00-11:30 AM Capitol Hill staff panel
11:30-Noon  Role play and planning
12:00-1:00 PM  Lunch and depart for Capitol Hill
1:00- 4:00 PM  Capitol Hill meetings
5:00-7:00 PM   Reception

In addition to the training and meeting opportunities, Work Family Congressional Education and Policy Day will include:

3:00-4:00 PM  Congressional Briefing - Room 430, Dirksen Senate Office Building
5:00 PM       Reception, with special multimedia Photo Exhibit “SHOWING (work x family)”

SHOWING (work x family) is a cultural project that activates photography in public spaces to reveal the intimate choreography of work and family. SHOWING includes a creative physical installation for art spaces, educational institutions, and community venues, and an innovative web-based experience. An ongoing high school photography assignment increases fluency about work-family issues and brings teen perspectives to the dialogue. SHOWING is a project of the Working Assumptions Foundation, a non-profit organization that collaborates with artists to amplify and recast the conversation about work and family.
Practitioner Day

The Work and Family Researchers Network has carved out a special day at the conference - Thursday, June 23rd - where leaders from organizations and leaders in research will come together to share knowledge, ask questions, and create a vision for the future of work and family. The 2016 WFRN Practitioner Day will provide a front row seat to the most recent research related to work and family. This one-day track offers specially selected breakout sessions with leading researchers who will be sharing new research on issues that impact the workplace.

Agenda:

8:00-9:00 AM: Practitioner Day Welcome – Federal A Room

9:00-10:30 AM: Breakout Sessions

- Workshop: Intervention Dilemmas - How Gendered Assumptions Can Undermine Even Well-Intentioned Change Initiatives; Session sponsored by WFRN Special Interest Group on "Reorganizing Work" – New York Room

[Session sponsored by WFRN Special Interest Group on "Reorganizing Work"]

This workshop is designed as an interactive learning session. The goal is to explore interventions with organizations or work groups -- and the dilemmas they present -- through an analytic framework we call a "gender lens". Experience has shown that work procedures and processes that make life difficult for employees, though seemingly gender neutral, are often embedded in gendered assumptions about work, competence and excellence. These hidden gender dynamics often undermine such interventions and make even successful efforts difficult to sustain. The aim of this session is to subject intervention stories to this analytical framework in order to advance our thinking, identify commonalities and differences and learn from each other's experience. We will begin by sharing one of our own stories and introducing the framework. Then we will invite participants to share intervention dilemmas and as a group, analyze these stories and catalogue the results. We will end with a brainstorming discussion to understand what we have learned and begin to identify possible strategies and solutions.

Organizers: Lotte Bailyn, Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT); Joyce Fletcher, Simmons University

7. Book Dialogue Session: 'Work-Family, Gender, and . . .': Examining Crucial Three-Way Intersections to Further Understanding - Session sponsored by WFRN Special Interest Group on "Gender and Work-Family" – Statler A Room

This session is based upon the recently edited book Gender and the Work-Family Experience: An Intersection of Two Domains (Mills [ed.], 2015; Springer Publishing). After a brief introductory overview of the research by the book editor (Mills), chapter authors will meet with interested participants in small group sessions (e.g., research incubator roundtables) in order to examine critical issues of import and discuss directions for future research and action. The specific three-way intersections of the work-family/gender interface included are: generational considerations (Goldberg), workaholic women (Clark), poverty (Odle-Dusseau), LGBT employees (Sawyer), race (Frevert), cross-cultural gender-role ideologies (Rajadhyaksha), guilt (Korabik), on-demand technologies (Grotto), women in STEM (Jean), and the inclusion (or lack thereof) of men in such considerations (Munn).

  Lisa Maureen Stewart — California State University, Monterey Bay

This panel focuses on how researchers, policy advocates, labor groups, and Hill staff are working together to advance evidence-based policy on workplace scheduling in the U.S. Scheduling legislation has been enacted in San Francisco and introduced into Congress and in over ten states and municipalities. The members of this panel have been intimately involved in shaping this legislation and will discuss both the politics and the pragmatics of moving scheduling legislation forward. A particular focus of the panel will be on the type of research that has been useful, and what research is still needed, in helping inform provisions of the legislation and in making the case for new workweek standards.

Organizer: Susan Lambert, University of Chicago

Panelists:

- Carrie Gleason – Center for Popular Democracy
- Susan Lambert – University of Chicago
- Jodie Levin-Epstein – Center for Law and Social Policy
- Leticia Mederos – U.S. Senate
- Elizabeth Watson – U.S. House of Representatives

19. Symposium: Practitioner Day Symposium: Connecting the Three Ps of Parenthood
Research: Publishing, Policy, & Practice – New York Room

This panel discussion will be comprised of three main topics: 1) the state of research on parenthood and organizational support; 2) public policy implications; and 3) bringing the research into practice. Courtney Masterson, one of the symposium organizers, will begin the session by briefly discussing the impetus for the symposium. Next, the academic members of our panel (Beth Humberd, Jamie Ladge, Laura Little, and Ariane Ollier-Malaterre) will discuss their experiences conducting work in the areas of parenthood and organizational support, highlighting key insights as well as the innovative ways in which such research can be conducted. Building on the state of the research, Judith Warner from the Center for American Progress will shift the conversation to provide a brief overview of public policy trends and the role that research can play in shaping future policy. Following this discussion, Kenneth Matos from Life Meets Work will bring attention to exemplary organizational support practices for parents and identify needs for future research. Lastly, we will break into small groups to spark positive connections among panelists and attendees to allow attendees the opportunity to share their own experiences and to generate new ways in which academics, policy advocates, and practitioners can collaborate to bring about meaningful change for working parents.

Organizers: Jamie J. Ladge, Northeastern University; Laura Little, University of Georgia; Courtney Masterson, University of Illinois, Chicago

Panelists:
- Beth Humberd – University of Massachusetts, Lowell
- Jamie J. Ladge – Northeastern University
- Laura Little – University of Georgia

22. Symposium: Practitioner Day Symposium: The Role of Federal Agencies’ Policies and Practices to Promote and Support Work-Life Balance in STEM – Massachusetts Room
This panel will focus on the role of the policies and practices of federal funding agencies in supporting work/life balance: within agencies themselves, through the research they fund, and in the STEM workforce more broadly. Work-life balance has become an increasingly important issue at the federal level. The Obama administration announced in January that Federal employees with a new child would be able to take up to six weeks of advanced paid leave. Recently, many funding agencies have moved forward on this front, clarifying current policies and enacting new policies to enable grantees to better balance work and family responsibilities. This panel will explore the ways federal funding agencies play a role in supporting work-life balance and what remains to be done to make such policies more inclusive and effective.
Organizers: Dana Britton and Jessie DeAro, National Science Foundation
Panelists:
- Dana Britton – National Science Foundation
- Jessie DeAro – National Science Foundation
- Bernice Anderson – National Science Foundation
- David Chambers – National Aeronautics and Space Administration

27. Workshop: State Level Work and Family Indicators for Policy Analysis, Program Design and Monitoring – Ohio Room

The goal of this workshop is to increase the use and usefulness/impact of policy-relevant work-family indicator projects. The leaders will share their insights and lessons learned in creating an indicator website and will highlight different types of state-level work-family indicators and the importance of focusing on subgroups (race/ethnicity, gender). Workshop trainers will also discuss how to be a smart consumer of indicators (i.e. measurement issues, suppression rules and other technical documentation), and showcase the breadth of indicator websites based on the panel attendees' work-family and health interests. The second goal is to provide an in-depth demonstration of a new interactive indicator project, www.diversitydatakids.org, which provides hundreds of indicators for children, parental employment and access to work-family policies such as the FMLA. Researchers and policymakers will be provided with a concrete example of how indicators can be used to enhance a policy discussion and how different organizations have used diversitydatakids.org indicators to advocate for the expansion of paid family leave policies and bring attention to underserved populations such as immigrant working parents.

Presiders: Pamela Joshi, Brandeis University; Alison Earle, Brandeis University

33. Practitioner Day Workshop: Our No Vacation Nation and How To Change It – Michigan Room

America is the no-vacation nation, the only wealthy country on earth that does not require paid vacations for workers. As a result, 42 percent of Americans received or took zero paid vacations last year, many gave days back due to pressure to work, and the median length of American vacations was little more than one week. American parents and children are among the world's most stressed and lack of vacation time makes it hard to alleviate stress and prevent burnout. This panel seeks to explore our aversion to vacation time, and the impacts of lack of vacation time on health, family connection, and appreciation for nature. We will examine how vacations are connected to improved productivity - increasing teamwork, planning, and creativity - and the need for more research in these areas. We will also share ideas about how to build a movement in the United States to finally win paid vacation time as a public policy. Panel members include leading researchers and leaders of the Take Back Your Time and ThirdPath organizations.

Presider: John de Graaf, Take Back Our Time

Panelists:
- Sarah Taylor Agate – SUNY Brockport
- Jessica DeGroot – ThirdPath Institute
- Jasmine Goodnow – Western Washington University
34. Workshop: Crafting a Meaningful Academic or Post-Academic Career – Senate Room
This session is a professional development workshop in which work-family scholars can engage in facilitated career exploration with the goal of creating a greater fit between their career values and their academic lives. In particular, this PDW will emphasize creative paths for work-family scholars to make an impact either within or outside the confines of traditional academic roles.

35. Workshop: There's an App for That? Designing an Online or Hybrid Course Using Up-to-date Technologies – Statler A Room
Working professionals including managers, researchers, and policy makers, among others, would benefit from learning about technological innovations that could make scholarship and pertinent workplace knowledge more accessible. One way to make this knowledge accessible is through online and/or hybrid courses. This professional development workshop will allow participants to think through important considerations in the development of content-rich hybrid/online courses that feature work-life wellness as a key actor within the core objectives of the course itself. Workshop topics will include: instructions and recommendations for successful overall course design, examples of evolving face-to-face activities to online activities, time for individuals to work on transferring their own activities or exercises to online formats, and a portion of the workshop will focus on an introduction to software, programs, and resources to help professors and other working professionals create rich, immersive learning communities while also maintaining the work-life wellness needs of both the educators and scholars in the contemporary digital world. Participants will leave the workshop with step-by-step methods to develop strong, interactive online courses based in their material of choice, as well as tools for creating healthy balances between class and life to facilitate creatively intelligent work.
Organizers: Yvonne Montoya, Colorado State University - Pueblo; Nicole Grider, Colorado State University - Pueblo

41. Thematic Session: Practitioner Day Workshop: Reshaping Work, Careers, and Life – California Room

There is a growing group of men, women, teams and organizations who are discovering new models for creating success at work while creating time and energy for their life outside the workplace. These individuals are developing diverse ways, which change over the course of the lifecycle, to successfully "integrate” work with their life responsibilities. They are also discovering that the best solutions come from an understanding of the interplay between work, careers and life. To explore this new landscape, and to allow for a rich and thought provoking conversation, WFRN and ThirdPath Institute have engaged top researchers who are experts in each of the related fields. During this workshop, practitioners alongside researchers will be invited to sit at one of four table topics and participate in small group, facilitated discussions. After 30 minutes, participants will then move to a second table topic. The workshop will conclude with a large group discussion on outcomes, questions and ideas that come from the small group conversations.

45. Workshop: Idea Incubator Workshop – Presidential Ballroom
Pre-registration was required for this workshop.

The Work-Family Research Idea Incubator Workshop will feature accomplished work-family scholars from multiple disciplines providing substantive and developmental feedback on research projects that are in their formative stages. This workshop will consist of informal, collegial roundtable settings. Each roundtable will have one or more facilitators to provide feedback and lead discussions on a small number of research papers or projects, allowing plenty of time for interactions among group members. Scholars at every stage of development - junior, mid-career, and senior - are welcome to attend. This workshop will provide an invaluable opportunity to receive detailed feedback from experienced scholars.

Presider: Maureen Perry-Jenkins, University of Massachusetts, Amherst
46. Workshop: Mentoring Workshop – Presidential Ballroom
Pre-registration was required for this workshop.
This workshop provides an opportunity to link junior scholars with senior advisors. Informal and confidential career advice will be offered by prominent scholars in a group discussion format. This session is ideal for assistant professors, postdoctoral scholars, and advanced graduate students.
Presider: Orfeu Marcello Buxton, The Pennsylvania State University

59. Thematic Session: Academic Womanhood: A Life Course - Career Perspective – Federal B Room

Using a narrative identity frame, panelists examine the multiple interdependent spheres academic woman occupy across careers from Ph.D. student to nearing retirement. Narratives involve the impact of caregiving throughout faculty careers: consideration of whether or not to mother, unexpected motherhood, single parenting, chronically ill or disabled children, blended families, caring for parents, re-mothering grandchildren and adult infirm children late in one’s career. Narratives turn barriers and constraints talk to ways academic jobs and care giving can mesh. Naming and framing shifts essential to advancing scholarship and altering policy around equality and work and family are discussed: work-in-life integration over balance; life course for complicated identities, rather than pipeline; and life friendly, rather than family friendly.

Panelists:
- Susan S. Case – Case Western Reserve University
- Angela Oetama-Paul – Case Western Reserve University
- Maike Philipsen – Virginia Commonwealth University
- Keimei Sugiyama – Case Western Reserve University

70. Symposium: New Directions in Gender and Work-Family Scholarship – Statler B Room

[Session sponsored by WFRN Special Interest Group on "Gender and Work-Family"]

The goal of this session is to encourage dialogue about moving gender and work-family scholarship forward in new and interesting directions. This symposium session will be a panel discussion in which the panelists will offer insights into cutting-edge gender and work-family scholarship, with an eye towards identifying areas of research that stand to break new ground. Specifically, we hope to explore ideas that will move us beyond mere examinations of gender differences between men and women, towards more innovative approaches that offer greater promise for bringing about social change. The panelists represent a range of backgrounds from management to policy research.

Organizer: Krista Lynn Minnotte, University of North Dakota

Presider: Maura J. Mills, Hofstra University

- Dana Britton – National Science Foundation
- Priyamvada Natarajan – Yale University
- Jennifer Lundquist – University of Massachusetts

74. Symposium: Promoting the Voice of Men as Leaders in the Work-Family Conversation – California Room

It is clear men are becoming more involved than ever in the conversation on work-family. However, men are not always front and center in the public discourse on work and family issues. As a result, some of the nuances of work and family that relate specifically to men may not get sufficient attention, and the intersection of work and family can be seen as an issue that primarily affects working mothers. Because of these concerns, researchers and advocates, as well as leaders in media and the corporate world are actively promoting the voice of men as leaders in the work-family conversation.

Organizer: Scott Behson, Fairleigh Dickinson University

Presider: Scott Behson, Fairleigh Dickinson University

103. Workshop: Navigating the Early Career Stage: Insights from the Early Career Network SIG – Massachusetts Room
[Session sponsored by WFRN Special Interest Group on "Early Career Network"]
This session is a panel of researchers and practitioners at various career stages who have come together for the purposes of providing insights and guidance to early career scholars (e.g., graduate students, post-doctoral researchers, junior faculty, and new practitioners) in the field of work and family. The panel discussion will begin with short presentations from each of the panelists, providing a brief overview of their career path to date (e.g., educational background, current occupation, career trajectory, and milestones). The moderators will then guide panelists in a discussion of several common topics relevant to early career scholars.
Organizers: Caitlin Ann Demsky, Oakland University; Ipshita Pal, Columbia University
Panelists:
- Marian Pam Baird – University of Sydney
- Michelle Budig – University of Massachusetts, Amherst
- Ariane Hegewisch – Institute for Women’s Policy Research
- Eden King – George Mason University
- Lauren Murphy – Washington State Department of Labor & Industries
- Anne Weisberg – Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison LLP

104. Workshop: Work-Family Policy in the Academy: Promises and Pitfalls to Organizational Change — New York Room
[Session sponsored by WFRN Special Interest Group on "Organizational Work-Life Policy: Structures & Outcomes"]
The panelists in this session will draw on multiple perspectives, including appreciative inquiry, feminist theory, organizational development, and communication studies, to discuss work-family change initiatives in the academy. The panelists will share where their work on this topic has been and where it is going, with a special emphasis on barriers to institutional change, unintended consequences of change, tested strategies, the importance of policy maintenance after institutionalization, and remaining institutional goals.
Organizers: Lindsey Trimble O’Connor, California State University, Channel Islands; Lori Wadsworth, Brigham Young University
Presider: Lori Wadsworth, Brigham Young University
Panelists:
- Susan S. Case – Case Western Reserve University
- Phyllis Hutton Raabe – Tulane University
- Lisa Maureen Stewart – California State University, Monterey Bay
105. Workshop: Research and Practice: Engaging Productive Connections — Pan American Room

[Session sponsored by WFRN Special Interest Group on "Connecting Research to Practice"]

The purpose of this workshop is to facilitate dialogue among expert panelists about the possibilities discovered and discoverable through researcher-practitioner connections. An international group of panelists will draw upon their own experiences to explore how researchers can and have approached scholarship in a way that supports connections with practice. Key questions to be addressed incorporate topics from the literature and key objectives outlined by members of the SIG on Connecting Research to Practice. Audience participation will be engaged during allotted periods throughout the session.

Organizers: Deirdre Anne Anderson, Cranfield School of Management; Kimberly Wells, U.S. Office of Personnel Management

Presider: Deirdre Anne Anderson – Cranfield School of Management

Panelists:
- Clare Kelliher – Cranfield School of Management
- Claartje Vinkenburg – VU University Amsterdam
- Kimberly Wells – U.S. Office of Personnel Management

Concluding Commentator: Lotte Bailyn, Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT)

  Matthew Weinshenker — Fordham University

107. Symposium: Workplace Protections for Pregnant and Breastfeeding Workers: Mapping Out a Research Agenda for Action — Federal A Room

There have been dramatic advances in the United States at both the federal and state level over the past few years in the legal support available for pregnant and breastfeeding employees. This panel discussion brings together legal experts and leading policy advocates to explain and discuss these important developments. Panelists will also identify areas where research by social scientists could be particularly helpful in advancing policy proposals and will discuss what pregnancy and breastfeeding accommodations are available to students and post doctorates in the higher education context under Title IX.

Organizer: Deborah Widiss, Indiana University Maurer School of Law

Panelists:
- Jessica Lee – University of California, Hastings College of the Law
- Emily Martin – National Women’s Law Center

112. Symposium: Paid Family Leave: Perspectives from New Jersey and New York —Statler A Room
This panel discussion brings together work and family researchers from New Jersey and New York to discuss paid family leave in these two states. The majority of the discussion will focus on the lived experiences of low-income parents, particularly mothers, from a state with paid family leave (New Jersey) with those from a state which up until recently was without a paid family leave program (New York). Along with presenting the findings of two qualitative studies with low-income parents in each state, panelists will also discuss New York’s new paid leave law, the challenges of implementing paid family leave in New Jersey, and what other states seeking to introduce paid family leave programs can learn from these experiences. The discussion will touch upon the relationships between research, advocacy, and policymaking and how these relationships have played out in both states.
Organizer: Suma Setty, National Center for Children in Poverty, Columbia University
Co-Presiders: Seth Hartig, National Center for Children in Poverty, Columbia University; Suma Setty, National Center for Children in Poverty, Columbia University

128. Symposium: Contesting Time: State and Local Battles over Paid Parental Leave, Paid Sick Time, and Schedules that Work —Federal A Room

The ability to control work time is one of the most crucial work-family issues. Although policy is largely paralyzed at the federal level, at state and local levels activist coalitions, usually with labor unions as central players, have won paid sick days, paid parental leave, and have put on the table laws to control abusive scheduling practices. Panelists have been involved as researchers and activists in these struggles, and will discuss lessons to be learned from them.

Organizer: Dan Clawson, University of Massachusetts, Amherst

Panelists:
- Wendy Chun-Hoon – Family Values at Work
- Carol Joyner – Labor Project for Working Families
- Ruth Milkman – The Graduate Center, City University of New York
- Peggy Shorey – AFL-CIO

134. WFRN Executive Committee Meeting
About the Work and Family Researchers Network

What is the WFRN?

The Work and Family Researchers Network (formerly the Sloan Work and Family Research Network) is an international membership organization of interdisciplinary work and family researchers. The WFRN also welcomes the participation of policy makers and practitioners as it seeks to promote knowledge and understanding of work and family issues among the community of global stakeholders.

The WFRN was formed in response to the need for a membership association of interdisciplinary work and family scholars. Unique among professional societies, the WFRN provides an online peer community with tools to strengthen connections among the global audiences interested in work and family. The WFRN facilitates virtual and face-to-face interaction among work and family researchers from a broad range of fields and engages the next generation of work and family scholars. As a global hub, we provide opportunities for information sharing and networking via our website, which includes the only open access work and family subject matter repository, the Work and Family Commons (WFC).

We Need YOUR HELP To Be Successful

• Members are the driving force of the organization.
• Members lead and run the organization as officers and committee members.
• Members take leadership roles in providing content of interest to the interdisciplinary work and family research community.
• Members create the program as well as attend and present their research at the conference.

Your involvement contributes to the vitality of academic work and family scholarship and ensures that high-quality work and family content continues to be available and accessible.

What We Offer You

Connect: You can connect with your work and family colleagues from around the world online and in person at our conference.

Learn: You can search our subject matter repository, the Work and Family Commons, stay current with the latest news via our News Feed, and learn about upcoming events on our Calendar.

Contribute: You can share your research via our subject matter repository, the Work and Family Commons, keep us updated on the latest news (e.g., blogs, news articles, newsletters) via our News Feed, and post your events on our Calendar. You can take a leadership role in the work and family community by joining a committee, serving as an elected officer, or leading/participating in a Special Interest Group.

Member Benefits

• An interdisciplinary work and family home base
• Access to the WFRN online resources and community
• Electronic subscription to Community, Work & Family journal
• Discounted conference registration
• Member Directory
• A weekly News & Events update
• A monthly update with information from the Work and Family Commons
• The chance to assume leadership roles as elected officers
• The option to serve as committee members
• Participation in a Special Interest Group
• Voting privileges
WFRN Officers January 2015-December 2016

President
Phyllis Moen, University of Minnesota, US

Vice-President
Suzan Lewis, Middlesex University Business School, UK

Secretary-Treasurer

Communications Committee

Mission: The Communications Committee will foster connections among members of the global work and family research community by developing and implementing a strategic communication plan across a variety of platforms, including the use of social media. The committee will ensure high-quality, comprehensive and timely communication with and among the membership, accomplished in conjunction with the Committee to Connect Research, Policy, and Practice. In 2014-2015, Kathryn Fonner and members of the Communications Committee were instrumental in setting up the new WFRN Special Interest Groups (see https://workfamily.sas.upenn.edu/content/wfrn-special-interest-groups).

Members

- Kathryn Fonner, University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, US, Chair (fonner@uwm.edu)
- Michelle Artibee, Cornell University, US
- Annis Golden, University of Albany, State University of New York, US
- Mary Hunt, Ave Maria University, US

The Committee to Connect Research, Policy, and Practice has created the Research Spotlight Series, which is envisioned to be highly practitioner-oriented with a focus on the implications of the research. The goal is for the spotlights to be concise, provocative, and targeted at how the findings can be applied. The Committee has recently undertaken a review of the process of developing spotlights, and details about this approach and interview questions that may be helpful in thinking about how to package your research in a highly applied fashion will soon be posted on the WFRN website.

Research Spotlight Series to date include:

- Gender Bias against Women of Color in Science. An interview with Joan Williams by Lisa Levey (May 2015)
- Creating the Sustainable Workplace. An Interview with Ellen Kossek by Emily Zuckerman and Lisa Stewart (November 2014)
- Perceived Family Responsibility Discrimination: A Growing Concern. An interview with Lindsey Trimble O’Connor by Lisa Stewart and Emily Zuckerman (May 2014)
- Modern Day Communication Technology: Empowerment or Enslavement? An interview with Uthpala Senarathne Tennakoon by Lisa Levey and Karen Murphy (February 2014)

To read the Research Spotlight series, go to the WFRN website, click on Resources, and then on the Research Spotlight Series: https://workfamily.sas.upenn.edu/content/research-spotlight-series

Early Career Work & Family Fellowship Program

The Work and Family Researchers Network is committed to mentoring the next generation of work and family scholars. The Early Career Work & Family Fellowship Program provides support for recent doctoral recipients to advance their research, teaching, and long-term career prospects. By offering networked resources and consultation, we help promising new scholars move into tenured appointments and secure senior-level positions, as well as engage them with the work and family community of scholars.

This program builds on two successful cohorts supported by the former Sloan Work and Family Research Network, and two cohorts supported by the Work and Family Researchers Network. We have created a diverse cohort of scholars from various disciplines with a wide range of work and family interests. A special thanks to the sponsors and organizational partners of the 2016 WFRN Conference, whose generosity has made the fifth cohort of Early Career Fellows possible. Below is a list of the participants of the 2016 Early Career Fellowship Program.

What to Do When You Return Home

Members are the driving force of the Work and Family Researchers Network. We need your involvement to succeed!

1. Deposit your conference presentation to the Work and Family Commons (WFC). Instructions are available on the WFRN Website under the heading: “Contribute Content.” Your presentation will be featured in the Monthly Update with information from the WFC sent to all WFRN members.

2. Join a committee if you haven’t done so already. See the list of committees and committee chairs on pages 68-71. Contact the committee chair.

3. Post work and family news to the News Feed and events to the Calendar on the WFRN website. Your post will be auto shared with our Twitter Feed and Facebook Page. It will also be included in the member-only Weekly News & Events email.

4. Participate in a Special Interest Group to share information, network, and collaborate with other WFRN members interested in your area of interest/expertise. The SIGs are intended to promote regular connections among WFRN members in-between conferences. For a complete list of currently active WFRN SIGs, visit https://workfamily.sas.upenn.edu/content/wfrn-special-interest-groups

5. Like us on Facebook, follow us on Twitter (@wfrn), and join our Linkedin Group

6. Complete the online evaluation form that we send you in a few weeks

Thank you so much for participating in the WFRN 2016 Conference. We look forward to your continued support and involvement!

Please plan to join us for the next WFRN Conference in June 2018! More details will be posted on the WFRN website and distributed to WFRN members and affiliates when they are available.
