Message from the President

Dear WFRN Members and Colleagues,

I am delighted to provide you with details of the WFRN’s 2020 Virtual Conference. Although the world has changed, WFRN’s commitment to furthering knowledge on pressing work-family issues, policies, and practices has not. Our guiding principle has been to design events that members will find valuable and meaningful, rather than just checking-the-box that WFRN held a conference in 2020. Our virtual events are intended to offer opportunities for WFRN members to engage with and learn from one another and to increase the impact of members’ research on work-family policy and practice.

The original theme for the 2020 conference, Advancing Equality at Work and Home: Strengthening Science and Collaboration, continues to serve as an organizing principle for our virtual events. WFRN is hosting three types of on-line events in 2020-2021. With the intent of fostering exchanges across the globe, times for events will vary, with some events occurring mid morning in the Americas and other events occurring mid morning in Europe/Africa and Asia/Oceania. Recordings of all three types of events will be available to members on the WFRN website and highlighted on the WFRN Research Feed.

1. WFRN Plenaries. Plenaries are live events that focus specifically on issues central to the conference theme. Panelists will present research, as well as engage each other and attendees in virtual discussions. WFRN Plenaries are held quarterly.

2. WFRN Sessions. Sessions are live presentations of symposia, author-meets-readers encounters and workshops that were accepted for the June NYC conference, as well as individual paper submissions that are grouped together specifically for the virtual conference format. WFRN sessions occur once a month with multiple sessions staggered over two or three-hour windows so that participants can choose to attend more than one session at a virtual event.

3. WFRN Showcases. Showcases are pre-recorded presentations of individual submissions that were accepted for the 2020 NYC conference as papers, posters or for roundtables. Some participants of symposia/author-meets-readers/workshops have also chosen to pre-record their contribution rather than presenting it live during a WFRN Session. As with WFRN Plenaries and Sessions, pre-recorded WFRN Showcases will be available to members on the WFRN website and highlighted on the WFRN Research Feed.

We hope that these new events will serve as models for future years. In the membership survey conducted earlier this year, WFRN members suggested that WFRN create additional venues for interacting with one another, especially during non-conference years. As a pilot initiative, rather than just a temporary fix for the conference, we will be seeking your input on how to continue the momentum we’ve begun this year of regularly coming together to exchange ideas and new research.

Thank you for your continuing commitment to WFRN and for the work you do to generate knowledge, policies, and practices that make a difference in the lives of workers and families throughout the world.

Sincerely,
Susan Lambert, President

PRE-RECORDED SHOWCASE PRESENTATIONS

Many members are participating in the conference by pre-recording their paper or session. Recorded presentations are available to conference registrants via URLs that are embedded in the password-protected registrant-access conference program. The conference program will be periodically updated with these links.
WFRN 2020 AWARDS

WFRN Lifetime Achievement Award

The Lifetime Achievement Award recognizes extraordinary scholars who have made enduring contributions to the work-family community. The award is selected by the Executive Board of the WFRN.

2020 Award Recipient: Phyllis Moen

Phyllis Moen holds a McKnight Presidential Endowed Chair and is Professor of Sociology, University of Minnesota. Prior to this, Dr. Moen was the Ferris Family Professor of Life Course Studies at Cornell University. She earned her doctorate at the University of Minnesota. She is the recipient of numerous awards and has generated over $20 million of research funding for her studies of working families and organizations.

Her nominators (Erin Kelly, Wen Fan and Shelley MacDermid Wadsworth) provided a rich summary of Dr. Moen’s research, far too lengthy to publish here. A few highlights (quoted from her nomination) help illuminate the impact she has had on understandings of family dynamics, organizational practices, and social policy.

Phyllis excels - and indeed is downright amazing - with regard to the volume of her contributions, the impact of her contributions to work-family scholarship and beyond, and her enduring commitment to the work-family community.... She has published over 200 articles or chapters, has been cited over 23,000 times, and has an h-index of 75 and an i10-index of 197. Furthermore, she published 10 books covering the topics of workplace policies and practices to address overload and the work-life interface, retirement and working for pay and in the community in later life, couples’ negotiations of their work and family responsibilities over the life course, the institutional and historical contexts that affect work-family strategies and decisions, and more. All of these figures and numerical rankings are impressive but those who have interacted with Phyllis Moen know she is not only concerned with getting more publications or citations; her primary goal is fostering a vigorous and welcoming intellectual community of work-family scholars. She is a habitual “institution builder.” She has repeatedly created fun and fulfilling projects and centers that involve junior scholars (from undergraduate students through junior faculty) and train future generations of work-family scholars and practitioners. She’s also a master of pulling seasoned scholars into the field, helping them see that whether they identify as scholars of unemployment, social policy, demography, stress and health, or aging, there are exciting ways that they can both learn from and contribute to the work-family community.
The Kathleen Christensen Dissertation Award

This award recognizes a recent graduate of a doctoral program who has already made a significant contribution to the work and family knowledge base. The Kathleen Christensen Dissertation Award has been created to encourage doctoral candidates and early career scholars to reach for/achieve high and rigorous standards of research relevant to the work and family area of study. It provides financial support to help a promising work-family scholar to initiate post-dissertation research. This award is co-sponsored and co-selected by the Work and Family Researchers Network and the Society for Human Resource Management. This award is made possible by generous support from the Northrop Grumman Corporation, the Families and Work Institute, the SHRM Foundation, SHRM’s National Study of the Changing Workforce, and the Work and Family Researchers Network members. The award recipient was selected by the review committee Alexander Alonso, Clare Kelliher, Gary Latham, and Christina Matz (chair).

2020 Award Recipient: Hak Yoon Kim

Dr. Hak Yoon Kim is currently an Assistant Professor of Organizational Behavior/Human Resource Management at the University of Nottingham Ningbo China. She received her PhD at Case Western Reserve University (USA) in 2019 in Organizational Behavior. Her dissertation is “The Working Mom’s Tug of War: Trajectories of Work-Family Conflict and the Buffering Roles of Job and Family Satisfaction.”

Dr. Kim’s research focuses on the dynamic nature of work-family conflict among working mothers by exploring trajectories of work-family and family-work interference and the buffering roles of personal resources such as job and family satisfaction. Her ambitious research project investigated the experiences of South Korean women over a six year period. Important findings of the study are the buffering role of job satisfaction and how linkages between interference and satisfaction can be explained by conservation of resources theory. Dr. Kim’s dissertation suggests that organizations can benefit by attending to the long-term effects of work-family conflict among employees, particularly for working mothers. She concludes that unless organizations (and societies) find ways to buffer against the negative effects of work-family conflict, birth rates among dual-earner couples may continue to decline. Her research directly relates to organizational practice, demonstrating how the creation of satisfying work can mitigate the adverse effects of work-family conflict. Dr. Kim plans to extend this research by focusing on working fathers’ experiences and on social class dynamics.
The Ellen Galinsky Generative Researcher Award

This award recognizes a work-family researcher or research team who have/has contributed break-through thinking to the work-family field via theory, measures, and/or data sets that led to expansive application, innovation, and diffusion, including the sharing of research opportunity in the spirit of open science. The award recipients were selected by the review committee Aixa Cintron-Velez, Ryan Johnson, Ujvala Rajadhyaksha, and Amy Wharton (Chair).

2020 Award Recipients: Leslie Hammer and Ellen Ernst Kossek

Leslie Hammer is Professor at the Oregon Institute of Occupational Health Sciences at the Oregon Health & Science University, where she is Co-Director of the Oregon Healthy Workforce Center. She is also a Professor at Portland State University in the Department of Psychology where she is Associate Director of the Occupational Health Psychology Program. She is an Elected Fellow in SIOP, the European Academy of Occupational Health Psychology, and APA. She received her doctorate from Bowling Green State University.

Ellen Ernst Kossek is Basil S. Turner Professor of Management (Chaired Professor in OB/HR) and Research Director of the Butler Center for Leadership Excellence at Purdue University Krannert School of Management. She is an Elected Fellow in the Academy of Management, SIOP and APA. She received her doctorate from Yale University.

Their nominators (Nicholas Smith and Shaun Pichler) focused on Professor Hammer’s and Professor Kossek’s combined efforts as related to the NIH funded Work, Family and Health Network and the impact of identifying and measuring family supportive supervisor behaviors (FSSB). In summarizing the contributions of this incredibly productive research team, they write:
Leslie and Ellen’s work in the area of work-family research is theoretically and practically far-reaching and impactful. Their areas of research are expansive and include work-family, work-life, flexibility, supervisor supportiveness, diversity and inclusion, among others. In the work-family space, Leslie and Ellen’s work is great in magnitude and has enhanced theoretical and practical understandings of how organizations can improve positive work and family outcomes by facilitating formal and informal supports. In particular, their expertise and interdisciplinary efforts led to the NIH funding the Work, Family, and Health Network in which the measurement of specific family-supportive supervisory behaviors (FSSB) was developed (Phase I) which led to multiple experimental field intervention studies in which supervisors were trained on how to engage in FSSBs (Phase II). They have also shown that family supportive supervision is related to many other positive outcomes such as improved performance, sleep quality, safety performance, health outcomes, and mental health. This work has positively impacted thousands of employees and shows the importance of drawing upon interdisciplinary research teams, engaging with organizational partners and practitioners, and utilizing multi-method multisource longitudinal designs, along with the important role that supervisors play in the well-being of employees’ work and family lives.
Early Career Work and Family Fellowship Program

The Work and Family Researchers Network is committed to mentoring the next generation of work and family scholars. Our Early Career Fellowship Program provides support for recent doctoral recipients to advance their research, teaching, and long-term career prospects. By offering networked resources and consultation, we help promising new scholars move into tenured appointments and secure senior-level positions, as well as engage them with the work and family community of scholars.

The goal of the program is to help promising young scholars establish career successes, integrate them within the WFRN research community, and guide translation of their research to inform the work of decision-makers. Fellows receive membership in the WFRN, conference registration, and $500 to attend an Early Career Fellowship Preconference and the WFRN Conference. To be eligible, candidates must have received their doctorate in 2016 or later and have yet to progress into tenured or secure senior level positions. Questions about the Early Career Fellowships can be directed to the program director, Lindsey Trimble O’Connor at lindsey.oconnor@csuci.edu.

Schedule of WFRN 2020-2021 Live Plenaries and Sessions

Live Plenaries and Sessions are scheduled for different time slots across the year, with the goal of recognizing and accommodating the diversity of WFRN’s membership. Three Sessions are scheduled at an Americas-friendly time, two Sessions at a Europe/Africa-friendly time, and one Session at an Asia/Oceania-friendly time. The number of each was driven by the preferences we received from symposia organizers and authors.

Each live event will have its own Zoom links. You can receive links either by (1) signing up for a particular Friday(s) through the Eventbrite URLs embedded in the program or (2) logging into the WFRN members page and then navigating to the conference webpage, where you will find the conference program with all links included (as well as links to recorded presentations).

We would appreciate registrants signing-up for the Friday(s) that they think they will attend (even if for only one of the presentations) via the embedded links in the program below. As a benefit of signing up, you’ll be able to easily add the event to your calendar (in your time zone) and you’ll receive a reminder email two days before the event that contains the Zoom links (and won’t have to navigate the WFRN website).
